

WE'RE ALL IN THIS TOGETHER

DEFENDING THE PUBLIC INTEREST DURING THE RECESSION: A COMMUNITY FORUM

As not-for-profit social agencies strain to meet increasing need with less funding, there is growing concern that governments' economic stimulus packages are doing more to serve the interests of corporate CEOs than address immediate social needs. The desperate struggles of those hardest hit by the recession are inspiring increased activism around issues of poverty, labour, health, human rights, housing, food security, and equity (among others), as people attempt to redirect their governments' attention to serving the public interest.
